Tom Mooney Wins 1st Round in His Fight for Pardon

Legislature Adopts Resolution to Free Him From San Quentin

SURTAX IS DEFEATED

Senate Foes Heartened—Pilkington Files Pledge for State Senator

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — (AP) — Tom Mooney won his first step Saturday of his newest fight for freedom from San Quentin prison.

The California legislature adopted a resolution to grant the prisoner a legislative pardon.

The resolution still must be approved by the California senate.

Mooney has been a prisoner in San Quentin for more than 20 years. He was convicted for the San Francisco preparedness day bombing.

Several previous attempts to win freedom through court reviews of his case have failed.

Fight Against Profits Tax

WASHINGTON. — (AP) — Senate foes of business levies in the administration's tax revision bill, heartened by the house's stand against a surtax on closely held corporations, indicated Saturday they would try to eliminate the undistributed profits tax.

Both house and senate had their usual Saturday holiday.

Pilkington Files Pledge

LITTLE ROCK. — (AP) — James H. Pilkinton of Hope, filed his corrupt practices pledge Saturday as a candidate for state senator from the ninth senatorial district composed of Hempstead, Pike and Montgomery counties.

Delay Court Suit on Index Bridge

Action Seeking Discontinuance of Toll Fees Is Postponed

LITTLE ROCK. — Court action seeking discontinuance of collection of tolls on the index bridge over Red river between Ashdown and Texarkana on Highway 71 will be held in abeyance until after adjournment of the special session of the legislature, Assistant Attorney General Millard Alford said after a conference with commissioners of the district at Ashdown.

Mr. Alford said it was considered probable that legislation might be enacted at the session which would have a bearing on the status of the case.

Attorney General Jack Holt filed suit in Little River Chancery Court several weeks ago seeking to enjoin the Red River Bridge District from collecting further tolls. He contended that the district had $29,367.08 on deposit to meet outstanding indebtedness of $16,500. The attorney for the district said that commissioners wanted to repay taxpayers for assessments levied on lands during 1917-24.

Widow Arrested on Murder Charge

Skeleton Found in Cellar of Home Near Town of Pocahontas

POCAHONTAS, Ark. — A warrant was issued Friday charging Mrs. Cora Treuba Hehner with murder, following the discovery of the skeleton of a man, allegedly that of her husband, Will Hehner.

It is believed that the person whose skeleton was found had been dead at least six months. Mrs. Hehner moved to this (Randolph) county and located near Noland about two years ago. She was accompanied by her husband, an invalid.

About a year ago they moved to the Shiloh neighborhood, five miles northwest of here, where they bought a small farm. She immediately posted notices over the farm and at the house which read: "No visitors allowed."

She made no friends and allowed none of the neighbors to visit her home. However, it was reported that cars from other states often were seen at the farm, sometimes remaining only on hour but sometimes more than a day.

Residents of the community noticed the husband's absence a short time ago and had an investigation made by the sheriff, but Mrs. Hehner convinced the officers that she had removed her husband to a St. Louis hospital.

About a month ago Mrs. Hehner decided to cease payments on the farm and to allow it to revert to the original owner. When she was asked to have her husband sign papers to complete the transfer, she again said that he was in a St. Louis hospital and it would be necessary to take the papers to him there.

She moved from the farm about a week ago, going to St. Louis. The farm was rented to J. W. Collier, who moved in last week. Last night, acting at the request of neighbors, Collier and his son dug into an old storm cellar, which

CRANIUM CRACKERS

(In this series of Cranium Crackers with a courtroom query, unusual local statutes may appear slightly the legal decisions given.)

In 1927 a bank sold a tract of forest land adjoining the Cabinet National Forest to Mrs. Christie for $2500, to be paid in installments over a period of years. Until the entire purchase price was paid the bank was to retain title to the property, but, from the date of the transaction, Mrs. Christie was to have the right to its possession and use.

Before the sale price was fully paid a fire broke out on the land. The bank made no attempt to control the fire, but the Supervisor of the Cabinet National Forest dispatched men and equipment to the scene and after more than a week of fighting, extinguished the blaze at a cost of $1,163.28.

The state statute provided that the person or firm on whose property an uncontrolled or spreading forest fire exists is responsible for taking reasonable steps to control the fire and upon failure to do so becomes liable for the cost of extinguishing such fire. The United States sued the bank and recovered judgment. The bank appealed, claiming that under the terms of the statute they were not the person on whose property the fire existed.

Was the judgment of the lower court correct?

Preacher

Rev. Charlie Elen Jaynes

Boy Preacher to Begin U. S. Tour

Rev. Charlie Jaynes, 7, Leaves Trail Converts Across Country

By NEA Service

BOSTON, Mass. — The world's youngest preacher again is packing his bags with Bible, black velvet suit, boys' hat and ball, dolls, and other necessities, preparatory to another sweeping evangelizing tour.

This time he will travel over Canada, for the seven-year-old Reverend Charlie Elen Jaynes, Jr., has recently covered the 200 principal cities of the U. S. A. and intends now to give an international aspect to his preaching.

He reportedly won 500 converts in his recent appearances here, with thousands of others to his credit elsewhere in the nine months since he was ordained as a full-fledged minister by the International Ministerial Federation.

Known Tricks of Holding Audience

The large congregations that flocked to his services here saw a child utterly free of nervousness and shyness as he faced them over his pulpit.

He greets his audiences with a cheery smile, knows all the tricks of demanding attention, and does not hesitate to go dramatic to put over his point. An energetic speaker, he waves his small, chubby arms, shouting and pointing a little stool in front of him, raising his childish face upward and going through all the emotions of an adult evangelist.

After his sermon he goes down into the audience and talks to those who have asked to be prayed for. Old men and children alike bow their heads and beg for forgiveness.

He preaches extemporaneously. Besides delivering stirring sermons he sings and plays the drums. His dress is as unusual as his talents. He wears a black velvet coat and short pants, a large white collar, high white socks and shoes. His hair is cut in a Dutch bob.

Using no notes and without prompting, he preaches his entire lengthy sermon by memory. He can quote 15 complete chapters from the Bible. Both his parents were preachers and he delivered his first sermon at the age of two and a half, repeating The Sermon on the Mount without a mistake.

He will speak to people anywhere about their welfare. On the trains, buses, depots or in the tabernacle, he doesn't make any difference. He has a desperate aversion to smoking and drinking. He warns men and women alike, without fear or favor, that they are "defiling the Temple of the Holy Ghost."

He has a normal boy's liking for football, baseball, toys, games—and other children.

"You know I'm a pretty good football player," he said proudly, "but I don't get a chance to practice much except when I'm home. I'd like to be a fireman in the daytime and a preacher at night," he told one of his congregations. "You see, then I could save people from both kinds of fire."

Council Asks for Part of Arkansas Gasoline Revenue

Would Finance Construction and Maintenance of City Streets

CIRCULATE PETITION

Council Also Discusses the Possibility of New Hope Fire Station

Mayor Albert Graves announced Saturday that the Hope city council, in special session, adopted a resolution requesting part of the state gasoline tax to be turned over to cities and towns of Arkansas to relieve cost of street improvement districts and to construct and maintain new streets.

The council also authorized the purchase of a new police automobile. Dealers of Hope will enter bids for sale of the car.

The council discussed the possibility of erecting a new fire station, but no official action was taken.

The resolution asking for part of the state tax on gasoline will be sent to the State Senator John L. Wilson and representatives for their consideration at the special session of the Arkansas legislature.

A petition bearing more than 500 names of Hope citizens will be attached to the resolution.

The resolution: WHEREAS, for the past seventeen years the State of Arkansas has recognized the principle that the cost of construction and maintenance of public thoroughfares should be borne by the users thereof, and during this time the residents of cities and towns owning motor vehicles have contributed to the construction of the State Highway system and farm-to-market roads within the counties through the payment of gasoline taxes; and

WHEREAS, this principle has been extended to the financing of farm-to-market roads by an annual turn-back of a portion of the gasoline tax to counties; and

WHEREAS, this principle has not been extended to cities and towns, and the financing of city streets has depended largely upon real property taxation; and

WHEREAS, it is not only equitable but proper that gasoline tax revenues should be expended in a reasonable proportion not only for state and county highway systems but also for the construction and maintenance of city and town streets;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE City of Hope, Ark., in special session assembled that the State Legislature be urged to devise a means whereby a reasonable portion of the gasoline tax collected by the State be returned to the cities and towns for use of streets.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that copies of this resolution be transmitted to our State Senator and Representatives and to the newspapers.

Adopted by the City Council of the City of Hope, Arkansas, this 10th day of March, 1938.

Motion made by L. A. Keith, seconded by Dr. F. D. Henry, that the above and foregoing resolution be adopted. Motion carried.

T. R. Billingsley, City Clerk.

Bodcaw Beaten by Little Rock Team

Walkerville, District 10 Runner-Up, Is Also Defeated in Tourney

JONESBORO, Ark. — Running true to form, the annual state high school basketball tournament reached the quarterfinal stage Friday night, with Monette and Jonesboro, Beebe and Pine Bluff and Little Rock and New Edinburg paired for Saturday play.

Monette's last-half rally to subdue L'Avaca, 28 to 26, and New Edinburg's hairline edge over Viola, 35 to 33, featured second-round play Friday and Friday night. Two of the other survivors, Pine Bluff and Ash Flat, the latter a dark horse, advanced on forfeits by McGeehee and Elkins, respectively. Jonesboro, defending champions, turned track meetish to pummel Walkerville, 90 to 29, and Little Rock's touted Tigers snuffed Bodcaw, 70 to 20. Beebe defeated Formosa handily, 50 to 26.

The Little Rock High School Tigers won, 70 to 22, over Bodcaw in their first appearance in the tourney Friday night. Coach Leroy Scott's Tigers gained a 12-10-7 lead in the opening period and continuously added to it. Little Rock led, 33 to 13, at the half, and 53 to 16 at the end of the third quarter. Howard Hughes, forward led with 19 points, followed by Lowell Martindale, guard with 10. Dunn, Bodcaw guard, led the losers with eight.

Farmers Vote on Cotton Program

180,000 Are Eligible to Cast Ballots in 71 of 75 Counties

LITTLE ROCK. — (AP) — An estimated 180,000 cotton farmers in Arkansas are eligible to vote Saturday in the cotton belt referendum to determine if marketing quotas are to be adopted for the crop under the new federal farm act.

Of the total eligible, observers expect about 150,000 farmers in this state to participate.

The voting will be carried out at 1800 polling places in 71 of the state's 75 counties. No election will be held in Benton, Carroll, Madison, and Washington, non-cotton counties.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—The concentration of interest on the forthcoming primaries and elections which lately has been shown by Mr. Roosevelt and his friends is partly traceable to a fear that 1938, rather than 1940 may turn out to be the last stand of the New Deal.

If F. D. R. is to control the Democratic party when it undertakes to nominate his successor more than two years hence he is going to need something that can be hailed as a personal victory next November.

To achieve that, he must identify himself with the campaign through certain definite issues. Moreover, he must assure the return to office of "loyal New Dealers" in Congress and, if possible, the defeat of conservative Democrats who have fought Roosevelt Policies.

A year ago, when the battle over the Supreme Court reorganization plan was on, there was plenty of talk about punishment and reprisal. Roosevelt himself inspired much of it. But the voters who had returned him to office in 1936 never did get excited about that issue and the President learned to his disappointment that he couldn't get them to punish senators simply because he resented their agreement with him on that one point. At one time he had been almost convinced that any senator who opposed him on the Court issue was committing political suicide.

Has His Hands Full

Until quite lately it seemed that the administration, far from being in a position to inflict reprisals on anyone for desertion on the Court and other issues, would have its hands full in merely trying to save the skins of the faithful.

Specific endorsements of Senators Alben Barkley of Kentucky, Claude Pepper of Florida and Ryan Duffy of Wisconsin—all in spite of solemn assurances that the White House "as usual" was keeping its hands off the justices—tending to emphasize the impression that the New Deal was on the defensive.

There was a period of moaning and gnashing of teeth over the paucity of strong New Dealish candidates who might have a chance of beating such senators as Clark of Missouri, Adams

Adolf Hitler returned in triumph to his native Austria Saturday while the Austrian nation, with mixed feelings, began to learn what it means to be under Nazi control.

Fuehrer of Germany made his entry into Lent a few hours behind his troops and airplanes.

Scores of German bombers and other military planes brought German soldiers into the suburbs of Vienna.

They remained there awaiting Fuehrer's triumphal entry into the capital of the state which has come under his power.

In Paris, Socialist Leon Blum struggled to pull together a national union government to meet the menace of powerfully expanding Reich, while in London the cabinet met to draft British course of action.

In both capitals the question was: "What will Hitler do next?"

In Moscow, 21 confessed traitors pleaded for mercy in Russia's blood purge trial.

HENDAYE, France. — (AP) — Insurgent shock troops struck Saturday at Hi Jar—scarcely 60 miles from the Mediterranean coast—in their smashing offensive to dismember the government of Spain.

German command reserves were rushed into breached lines along a 70-mile front.

Communiques from Madrid admitted that insurgents advanced more than 25 miles eastward toward coastal Valencia.

Schuschnigg Ousted

VIENNA. — (AP) — Bowing to Germany's war power, the Austrian government gave up its five-year fight against annexation by the German fuhrer, Adolf Hitler.

German troops, massed on the border marched into Austria at three points.

Faced with a German ultimatum demanding reorganization of the government, the anti-Nazi chancellor, Kurt Schuschnigg, resigned. President Wilhelm Miklas appointed Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Austria's Nazi leader, to succeed him.

Earlier, Seyss-Inquart had sent a telegram to Hitler saying that the "provisional Austrian government" requested Germany to send troops as soon as possible to assist it in "preventing the shedding of blood."

The new chancellor was one of five Nazi sympathizers included in the cabinet at Hitler's order February 15. He started formation of a cabinet which the Press Bureau said would give "thorough recognition to Nationalists."

Austria Gives In

Developments came after moves and counter-moves by Schuschnigg and the Nazi government. There was violence throughout Austria Thursday and Friday. Early Friday German troops mobilized near the Austrian border. Austria likewise sent troops to danger points. Schuschnigg had his regular army of 70,000, but called out 100,000 reserves and 30,000 guardsmen.

Vienna and many Austrian cities were in turmoil, with Nazis and Schuschnigg supporters clashing over a plebiscite on Austrian independence which Schuschnigg had ordered for Sunday. Nazis denounced it vehemently, contending it violated Schuschnigg's agreement with Hitler at Berchtesgaden February 12.

As tension increased, Schuschnigg postponed the plebiscite indefinitely.

Hitler's Ultimatum

In a radio broadcast Schuschnigg said: "Today we have been confronted with a difficult and decisive situation. I am authorized to report to the Austrian people on events of the day."

"The German government presented the federal (Austrian) president with an ultimatum with a time limit according to which he had to appoint as chancellor a candidate who would be proposed to him and appoint a government according to the dictates of the German Reich. Otherwise German troops would march into Austria at the hour named."

Spending Federal Cash on the Country School

ONCE there was a theory that the 48 states were separate entities with individual problems and personalities. It's a fading theory that a few discouraged southern senators cling to.

For the federal government is a doting parent, now, a parent which lavishes affection and largess upon its states with a jealous loving care.

Fifty years ago if someone had mentioned that in 1938 the federal government would be telling an Arkansas farmer what he could raise and how, there would have been a howl to the heavens.

That and other federal regulations we've come to accept, along with a thousand other central government aids and supervision that few persons realize they are paying for in federal taxes.

PERHAPS you didn't see or didn't stop to consider the President's recent message to Congress in which he transmitted the report of the Advisory Committee on Education. The committee urged, and apparently the President sanctioned, federal grants to the states for educational purposes which would begin in 1939 at $70,000,000 and increase by 1944 to $199,000,000.

The grants are to be used for current operating and maintenance expenses of public elementary and secondary schools; to improve the preparation of teachers and other educational personnel; for the construction of school buildings; for the improved administration of state departments of education; for "civic, general and vocational part-time adult educational activities"; for rural library service.

The President told Congress: "Glaring inequalities characterize educational opportunities and expenditures for schools throughout the nation. Educational service . . . in many localities is below the minimum necessary for the preservation of democratic institutions."

President Roosevelt wouldn't have, probably, much difficulty proving that statement, but he might have difficulty convincing most people of his next words which were:

"Federal aid is the only way in which the difficulties in this widespread and complex situation can be adequately corrected."

IN THE first place, schools aren't exactly interstate commerce, even by Mr. Roosevelt's definition thereof. Secondly, the states should have some prerogatives and responsibilities left, or there isn't any point in having state governments. Thirdly, why should the federal government set up educational departments whose function is to aid similar state departments already set up, a patent duplication of duties. And lastly, the more state duties and responsibilities toward the care of the state's citizens that the federal government takes over—the more duties and responsibilities the state will allow the federal government to assume.

Any parent knows that, if the administration doesn't.

Ten Million Bugs

FLYING clipper planes have carried ten million passengers in the last year that haven't signed the guest register, but they've been mighty important passengers just the same. Ten million bugs.

The latest of these were flown in fighting divisions of 10,000 each from the banks of the Amazon to the West Indies, 2000 miles away, and they saved the sugar crop on several of the lower islands.

These islands had been attacked, literally, by sugar cane borers, and the efforts of scientists were unavailing. Thousands of gallons of insecticide had been sprayed over the fields of cane. Acres of the infected land had been burned. The borers marched on.

So science turned to another continent for the famous "Amazon Fly," natural enemy of the borer. Previous attempts to ship the insects by steamer had failed. They died en route. But this time they were loaded in "bug pullmans" by the ten thousands, flown to the West Indies, and freed. In a few weeks the borer had been reduced to the status of a minor pest.

Where Torrent Tore Up Street in Burbank

A little thing like a concrete street meant nothing to the torrents that rampaged through the Los Angeles area after four days' downpour. This picture, taken in the suburb of Burbank, shows pavement washed out by the fury of the flood. Note the shack and car overturned at the side of the street. This was just a small part of the tremendous damage wrought by the floods that inundated 30,000 square miles of southern California and ravaged more than 100 towns.

the child is accustomed to eating a cereal or vegetables, arrangements ought to be made to provide this with the use of traveling outfits such as now come in baskets with vacuum flasks, pans of various kinds and glasses.

LOVE LAUGHS AT THE DOCTOR

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CONSTANCE MAIDWELL—
Reverend the standard
DEREK MANTHON—an artist who loved money first.
HILDEGARDE THORVALD—
Derek painted her portrait.
MR. HOGGINS—he met his most difficult case.

Yesterday, Derek broke the news that he is to leave for California to paint a portrait of Hildegard Thorvald. A knock heard him then at the door.

CHAPTER III
DEREK muttered something impatient and called, "Come in!" At sight of his guests, however, his manner altered as if by magic. In an instant he was all charming, boyish deference.

"Why, good morning, sir!" he cried. "It was nice of you to drop in again. . . . Do sit here, Miss Thorvald."

As the tall golden girl in the rich fur wrap moved forward, Constance was unpleasantly conscious of her own faded tweed and shabby hat.

"Miss Thorvald, may I present Miss Maidwell?" Derek was murmuring. "Miss Maidwell—Mr. Thorvald."

There was in his gesture the manner of one presenting Constance to royalty.

Hildegard Thorvald said in a slow, warm voice, "How nice to meet one of Mr. Manthon's friends—since we are to see a great deal of him for a while. . . . Perhaps you are an artist, too?"

"Oh, no!" smiled Constance. "My artistic effects are achieved solely on the typewriter."

"Oh, you write then?" Miss Thorvald's manner was simple and friendly.

"If you can call it writing. . . . They would chat for a while, like this, about nothing; and then Derek would tell them. . . . Constance heard her own voice running on lightly. "My best literary efforts sound something like this: Manthon, Derek; American gallery. Born, Worcester, Massachusetts, 1905. . . . Honorable Mention, 1935. First Prize Winner, 1937. Pictures exhibited: Old Man Resting, Italian Boy, Lady in Blue. You see, I catalog for the Museum."

"The Lady in Blue?" Miss Thorvald's amber eyes were suddenly interested. "Of course. I thought I had seen you somewhere before. The portrait is really lovely. I couldn't help feeling that there was a story behind it."

CONSTANCE glanced at Derek under veiled lids. He was smiling and flushed with pleasure. . . . He would tell them now.

"Well, you see, Miss Thorvald," he began, "that canvas has a special significance for me. It was finished the day—"

"Hello!" Ernest Thorvald, who had finished writing in his notebook, glanced at his watch and stood up decisively. "Guess we'd better get down to the business that brought us."

Constance knew a moment of shocked disbelief as Derek broke off, his sentence unfinished, to turn to the older man.

"Now about the arrangements for your workshop at the ranch," Ernest Thorvald was going on. "I'm ordering some fixtures to be sent on at once. Perhaps you'll look over this list now. . . . or better still, since I see you're practically packed, perhaps you had better run along in the car with us and make a few selections before we go to the airport."

Derek tore his eyes from Constance's face to say, "Right, Mr. Thorvald. . . . I'll just shut this trunk, and everything's ready. The janitor will nail up the boxes and take care of the expressman."

Mr. Thorvald said agreeably, but quite as if Derek's acquiescence had been a foregone conclusion. "Fine. That will simplify matters. . . . Nice to have met you, Miss Maidwell," and started briskly out of the room. HILDEGARDE THORVALD lifted one eyebrow as if occupied with some secret amusement of her own, rose with supple, long-limbed grace, and strolled toward the door. Derek seized the moment to mutter swiftly with a pleading smile, "It wouldn't have done to force it, darling—tactless and awkward. . . . Please wait here. I'll be back for a few minutes at least. They can't do this to us."

"They seem to—with effortless ease," said Constance through lips tense with the strain of smiling. As Derek followed Mr. Thorvald down the corridor, Hildegard lingered to put her hand into that of Constance, and ask impulsively, "Can't we take you somewhere? It seems the least we can do."

"Why, thank you," Constance answered, her smile very bright, her tone clear and brittle as ice. "But I—I'll have to run along. . . . So glad to have met you."

"Oh, dear," breathed the tall girl, "aren't we all being rather oh, well—sorry you won't come."

She turned to collect her belongings from a table, hesitating for a perceptible moment over the business as if caught by an amusing idea; and then with a nod and smile she went out and down the corridor.

So that was Hildegard Thorvald—the girl Derek was to spend weeks with in the exacting intimacy of artist and model.

Derek had said that Ernest Thorvald was of Scandinavian origin. This daughter of his, though tall and lithe as a Valkyrie, was tawny rather than blond, with eyes and hair of light brown shot with deep golden lights, and a golden skin, pulsing with a warm, rich glow—fragrant and lovely as a sun-ripened peach. . . . Most definitely she did not have a hare-lip.

THE door burst open, and Derek hurried in. "A bit of luck at last," he cried, catching Constance to him and laughing like a mischievous schoolboy. "Miss Thorvald left one of her gloves, and I didn't waste any time offering to come back for it. . . . She couldn't say just where it was. And, no finished, his cheek against hers, "under the circumstances, it's bound to take me a little time to hunt it. Isn't it, darling?"

Suddenly Constance remembered Hildegard Thorvald's brief hesitation as she paused to collect her belongings—that amused, secret flicker of a smile in her eyes. . . . And in that moment she hated the other girl for the impulsive kindness of the gesture that had sent Derek back to her.

"You needn't hunt at all," she said clearly. "The glove is right there on the table."

"Oh, well!" Derek released her reluctantly. "The sooner I run along, the sooner I can get back. . . . Wait here for me, darling."

When Derek had gone, Constance stood staring at the door, the back of her hand beating against her lips.

So Derek had come back only because another woman had sent him back to find her glove. It was a hateful thought. But try as she might, Constance could not entirely hate the tall girl. Hildegard Thorvald, she told herself, was kind—with a kindness as warm and natural as that of the sun that mellowed her father's fruit.

And of course Derek must think of his future—their future, Derek did not want to go away from her. She did not need to hear him say that to know it. . . . But, oh, how she had wanted to hear him!

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

An Exciting Tale of Exhilarating Life

It's a bit hard settling down to the routine job of living after 40 pages or so of John D. Craig's exciting book, "Danger Is My Business" (Simon and Schuster, $3). Here is assuredly one of the best-written autobiographies to come off the presses in a long time.

That is, if you can call the book an autobiography; for John Craig, adventure photographer and deep-sea diver, is only now 31. But consider what he has packed into those years since he was 20.

To begin with, Craig inherited a small fortune in oil wells just as he turned 20. So he set out to see the world. And he did! He traveled in 35 countries, was captured by the Rif, shot big game in the heart of India, accidentally unearthed the original building plans for the Taj Mahal. Then he went broke. But not before he had become a camera bug.

He returned to America, because deep-sea photography for Hollywood; shot sequences for "Trader Horn," "Esquimo," "I Cover the Waterfront" and other pictures. And in his extremely risky business Mr. Craig found danger his chief occupation. No man knows better, for example, how it feels to have the lifeline cut just a hundred feet down with only eight minutes left to live; the eerie sensation of the first test of helium in a diving suit.

This spring the author is going to dive off the Virginia coast to the decks of the treasure ship Merida, and in early summer go down to photograph the salvage operations on the Lusitania. After that he hopes to spend a few more years exploring the slimy hulks of other famous ships. The fellow loves the work!

You ought to enjoy his book so much.—P. G. F.

Once I saw a mother back into the hall and call her boy to come and get the dog in the kitchen; the animal was growling and frothing at the mouth. The dog wasn't mad, only sick, but she did not know that. Afterward, she had no recollection of doing this, and endangering her child.

She was so paralyzed with fright that she was unaccountable for her actions. I shall add, if you want to know, that Billy came in, picked up Tippy and carried him out to the yard. Yet his mother was upset and disappointed because her boy would not play basketball, or rough it with the other youngsters on the sand lot. "He wants to read all the time," she would complain.

We are very fond of setting up standards for our children that we could never live up to.

Fathers, Too

Daddies are no exception. The man who is afraid of his shadow at the office often sends his son into back-chitching the street bully and daring him to fight. "The truth is that parents want their children to succeed where they have failed. This is not unusual enough, perhaps, but a trifle unreasonable.

The power of suggestion can be constructive as well as destructive. First of all, the fewer demonstrations of cowardice in the family the better. The words, "I am afraid of this or that," will bear bitter fruit. "I am learning that storms are nothing to fear," produces excellent results.

As for our John, praise for the courage he has will beget new courage. "If I'm such a wimp of a fellow," he reasons, "why can't I try playing ball? I might be hit by the hard old thing, but I can try. Wouldn't it be tickled if I told him I was on the team?" Pride is a wonderful stimulant. So much better than belittling or discrediting. Added to suggestion of the proper kind, it is unbeatable.

If the Baby Must Travel, Make Its Trip Just as Homelike as Possible

(No. 472)

In getting ready to move the baby on a long trip, the parents must remember how to get the baby ready to start, what will be needed on the trip, and what will be required after the baby gets there.

Before the trip starts, the baby should use its chair. Unless this is attended to, the action may occur at some very inopportune time. If the child is used to a certain kind of chair, it will be found difficult to prevail upon him to use a substitute of a different kind at the end of the journey.

It is, therefore, desirable to take the usual chair along or to have a duplicate at the end of the journey. This means, of course, that it is well to start training the child early to use different types of receptacles for the purpose.

If the weather is unusually cold, it is probably best to skip the morning bath just before the start of the trip. In pleasant weather the baby may have its bath as usual.

It is not well to crowd two feedings close together because the baby is going to start on a trip, with the idea that the second feeding may thus be avoided. Due to the excitement, the baby may vomit the feeding just as the trip has started or a few moments after. If convenient the meals should be given at the usual time in the usual amounts and in the usual way.

Remember that at the end of the journey, the baby will require a place to sleep, preferably its own sheets, blanket, diapers, washing materials and night clothing.

While on the trip, the baby will require some diapers, perhaps one or two changes of clothing, materials for washing the baby, including powder, soap, pins, etc. These should all be packed conveniently in a single carry-all case so that the mother or the nurse responsible will know exactly where everything is because when they are needed, they may be needed in a hurry.

Most transcontinental trains and even the airplanes now provide suitably for heating the child's food formula. People who travel in motor cars can usually pick up the necessary help in this regard at tourist camps, hotels and other places. If, however,

When a Mocking Bird Sings

Today I heard an orchestra,
Flute, flute and violin,
With all the notes of all the birds
Just for good measure thrown in.

The concert hall from which was poured
Such floods of golden melody
Was not man-made of brick or stone
But just the top of one green tree.

And as I watched, so still, so still,
Seeking to trace each liquid note,
I found each wondrous instrument
Tuned to one tiny feathered throat.

Today I heard an orchestra
Pour forth a rapturous symphony,
And leader and musicians were
Just one wee bird in one green tree.

Baer Wins Battle From Tommy Farr

Former Champion Gets Down to Business for Decision

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Max Baer, former heavyweight champion, took long strides along the fistie comeback trail Friday night by giving Tommy Farr, British title holder, a thorough drubbing in a sizzling 15-round bout before a near capacity crowd in Madison Square Garden. Baer weighed 212 and Farr 203 1/2.

Only the Welshman's gameness and a jaw that must have been made of cast iron enabled him to go the distance. He was a badly whipped fighter as he left the ring after 15 rounds of bruising, savage mauling.

The former California playboy, down to serious business for the first time since his days on the throne, had the man who stayed 15 rounds with Joe Louis on the floor three times. Baer won 11 rounds on the Association Press score card. Farr was given three and one was called even.

Already licked by Louis and James J. Braddock, another former champion, the defeat Friday night virtually eliminates the Britisher from the championship picture and puts Baer in a commanding position to demand first shot at the world's next June's battle between Louis and Max Schmeling, the slugging schlager from Germany.

Displaying most of his old time punching ability, Baer sent Tommy to the deck for a count of one with a stinging left to the jaw in the second round, then just to show he is a versatile mauler repeated in the third, with a right to the jaw. This time Farr took a six count. The third knockdown came in the 14th from a short right to the jaw.

The former champion started out like wildfire, tired somewhat during the middle stints but rallied gamely to capture the last three rounds after a four-round spurt by the Welshman had the crowd of 18,222 customers, who paid $74,000.22 to see the bruising battle, on their feet.

Telephone Manners
Begin on Your End
the Wire, Mister

By JOAN DURHAM
AP Feature Service Writer

On the telephone, it's not so much what you say as how you say it. Telephone conversations always should convey a feeling of personal interest, says John Turner, telephone executive and specialist on telephone manners.

When your phone rings and you pick up the receiver, he says, don't toss a peremptory "Hello" or a vaguely inquiring "Yes?" into the mouthpiece. Give an informative, sociable "Mrs. So-and-So's residence" or "Mrs. So-and-So's telephone." If you have servants don't let them say "Mrs. So-and-So's maid (or butler)," either. That sounds pretentious.

At the office it is well to give two items of information as soon as you pick up the receiver: the firm's name and yours. If there is a switchboard operator to give the firm's name, it's best for you to answer with "Mr. Business Man speaking."

Added telephone hints: Hold your mouth directly in front of the mouthpiece and about half an inch away from it.

When you want to get the attention of the operator move the receiver arm up and down slowly. If you do it fast the light on her switchboard may not register your call at all.

In making business calls be brief and to the point. The call itself costs money, the time is valuable to your firm and someone else may be waiting to use the line.

Nearly all employers will realize that a certain number of personal calls are necessary during business hours. But there must be an understanding between employee and employer on the subject.

"The federal president authorizes me to inform the Austrian people that we yield to force. Because even in this grave hour we are not minded at any price to shed German blood, we have given our armed forces an order that to ease invasion is carried out they are to withdraw without resistance and await decision on the orders which are to come."

"The president has entrusted Gen. S. Schulhavy, inspector general of troops, with command of armed forces. Through him further instructions will be given to the armed forces."

"So, in this hour, I say good-bye with the heartfelt wish that God will protect Austria."

'Worrying Rock' Gets too Much Business

HAFFVILLE, Ga.—(AP)—It didn't take Bill Ward long on the municipal "worrying rock" to find out it doesn't pay to worry about other people's troubles.

The community erected the rock on the public square to help humanity unburden its cares. Ward took over the job as official worrier and lasted two days sitting out the worries of the public.

"It was all going out and nothing coming in," he said as he threw up the job with a gesture of futility. "Lots of people wanted to worry for them but that did not do my own worries any good."

Governor E. D. Rivers assisted in dedicating the "worrying rock," which Courtland Gilbert, a newspaper editor, suggested to give "disappointed lovers, politicians and others a place to unload without bothering other people." Thousands have used the rock, visitors from many states stopping to sit on it and crase a worry or so.

At Saenger

Two romantic themes form part of the interesting story of "Radio City Revels" showing Sunday and Monday at the Saenger. Kenny Baker and Al Miller are principals of one, while Helen Broderick and Bob Burns carry the torch in the other.

Both these romances are played against a background of exciting adventures in the famed broadcasting capital, with unusual comedy contributed by Jack Oakie, Milton Berle, Victor Moore and others. A number of world famous specialty artists also appear including Jane Froman, Buster West, Melissa Mason and Hal Kemp and his orchestra.

Gold Well

MONTICELLO, Calif.—(AP)—When C. D. Skrabale started to dig a well he was struck by the appearance of the rock he uncovered. Sending it to an assayer, he found it assayed $1.25 in gold to the ton. As he dug deeper values increased to $3.25, then $10.

Now Skrabale has decided to turn the well into a mine.

Stamp News

To mark the athletic events which recently took place in Panama, the country has issued five stamps labeled "Commemoration of the Fourth Olympic Games of Central America and the Caribbean." They depict basketball, baseball, soccer, swimming and boxing. Three are for ordinary postage and two for air mail use.

Regulations issued by the Treasury Department governing the reproduction of U. S. stamps in black and white, for the first time in newspapers and periodicals, require that each stamp shown be either less than three-quarters or one and a half times the original size. Regular use of U. S. stamps under this law is contemplated for this column shortly.

First-day cover collectors may now obtain the 1938 catalog of "Specialized First Day Covers" from Leo August, Newark, N. J. With the demand for these covers greater than at any time in philatelic history, the book fills a real need in the field. It lists statistical data and prices.

Still resting with the "America's No. 1 Stamp Collector," President Roosevelt, is the decision on the 1938 U. S. stamp program. Recommendations have been made to the President, including, it is reported, the long-deferred "Presidential" set and several commemorative. The "Presidential" set would gradually replace the "regular" stamps which have now been in use for several years. (Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.)

No. The United States Circuit Court in the case of First State Bank versus United States, 92 Federal Second 132, (1937), held that the contract of sale vested the entire beneficial interest in the land in Mrs. Christie and that during the life of the contract the bank retained the bare legal title only as security for the purchase price.
